HISTORY AND ARTISAN TRADITION

Our hand-pressed cement tiles are crafted one at a time with the same traditional processes that were used 500 years ago. The boutique, hand-pressed tiles are the product of expert workmanship and eye for detail.

Natural mineral pigments, marble powder, fine sand and Portland cement are combined into individual moulds and then compacted manually. Once fully cured, each tile is then manually ground and buffed. This artisan process and natural mineral pigment give each tile a unique colour, that pick up similar tones in a design project. Subtle, subdued colours and aged appearance combine to give the cement tiles a slow flooring feeling.

Whether using one colour or mixing colours to form a pattern, these hand-made tiles provide a unique flooring option.
